

Overview

Rely on a Mining team that has regularly assisted a number of domestic and international companies in the mining industry in dealing with their various legal needs. Our team has the experience to handle your legal needs, from the formation of a mining company in Mexico to its registration as concession holder, and including staking of concessions, negotiation of joint ventures, sell-downs, restructures, royalty and off-take agreements, project assessments for acquisitions (including due diligence and transactional assistance), as well as supporting regulatory compliance obligations.

For centuries, well before Mexico became an independent country, the mining industry has been at the core of its economy. A leader in both production and reserves of many metals and non-metal products, Mexico attracts companies from multiple jurisdictions to its mining sector.

The mining industry enjoys a stable legal and regulatory framework with companies operating under long-term exploration and exploitation concessions on a royalty basis. Every day companies invest in new projects, acquire existing operations or undertake project expansions.

Benefit from a global law firm that can provide you with a legal team tailored specifically to you and your business partners, who may be from any part of the world, delivering legal solutions wherever you need it.
