

Overview

Whether you are funding a project or the sponsor developing it, financing a project in Mexico requires a knowledgeable team of experienced and responsive legal counsel that can handle the many legal issues involved in closing a deal.

Benefit from our extensive experience helping clients, including both borrowers and lenders, achieve financing for a broad range of projects—from an industrial plant or a real estate development to a power plant or a highway project. Our comprehensive services include identifying a project's financial risks by conducting due diligence, negotiating loan agreements, putting in place the security packages, or setting up an emissions reduction purchase agreement under the Kyoto Protocol as part of the payment of the financing. From corporate and regulatory perspectives, we will ensure that any structure implemented for you is fully bankable and comfortable to project lenders when putting together a project.

Our unique combination of financial services experience and our leading position in energy and infrastructure development will provide you with seamless and effective service. These combined capabilities have been used by US, Mexican, Japanese and European commercial banks, development banks and multilateral agencies for assistance in a broad range of financings.

If your project involves entities outside Mexico, we are committed to providing you with local knowledge and extensive practice experience on a global scale.
